

The Hope Survey is a unique tool that enables organizations of any size and nature, for-profit or non-profit, corporate, small business, school, or social community, to assess the hopefulness of their environment through the eyes of their people.

Why Grow Hope?

High-hope individuals, organizations, and communities are 30% more likely to be equitably successful.

The ability to grow and sustain hope delivers a significant increase in workplace productivity.

Hope builds resilience, removes unfounded fears, and makes space for creativity and innovation.

What we measure...

Individual perceptions of empowerment, belongingness, goal orientations (pathway thinking), agency, efficacy, autonomy, and engagement in day-to-day activities.

The Hope Survey provides a research-based, data-driven, cross-cultural, behavioral method of assessing and growing an organization's likelihood for sustained success.

When compared with the impact of sustained, positive performance outcomes and grade-point-averages (GPAs), hope wins every time. The research is clear that higher-hope individuals are better at engaging in self-directed learning and finding the greatest fulfillment in their academic and professional lives.

A Hope Practice[®]

Building a practice of hope meets learners where they're at, without an expectation of prior wisdom or proficiency.

This universal approach engages participants in personalized experiences, allowing for a diverse portfolio of activities to take hold and grow over time. This shortens the time to proficiency, real-life application of learning, and more frequent thresholds of achievement.
